Mr. Miller entered on literary life in good health with a rugged constitution; he lost them both, d fied ingloriously—BY LARGE SUPPERS AND LATE that ingloriously—BY LARGE SUPPERS AND LATE of the chat tells the whole story. He are much, orded little, slept less. These things persevered, will kill any man. "He always made his super the principal meal of the day," is the record site of him. "He sat up till the morning hours, mining his mental faculties to the highest possible " and with a brain thus on fire, laid down, to sleep, but to troubled dreams and horrid stops of the night. The morning found him unreshel, haggard and uneasy; and with such a mind of such a body, he girded himself for another day's ark. Under such circumstances, the body and the min were thrown into a state of "irritation," med-

In previous numbers of the Journal, we have reentelly advised persons that inability to sleep was state of great danger; that it preceded insanity, to that it was imperative under the circumstances in every thing like business or study should be inous effects which continued efforts and anxiewere exerting on his own mind: and they left nly half a man; and to use his own words, d with laborious special preparation, with throes bich tortured him during the process and then left in ethausted, the victim of nervous depression and tion. What made a wreck of this great mind? ninetyline and a half out of a hundred will say it was "hard study," " close application," " over mental

the judgment of charity: and the cloak of pity and in the case of the bodily powers wearing them-selves out in this useless labor, several interesting phenomena are presented. The changes are more or less gradual. The stomach first begins to give out, as the brunt of the labor falls first on it. It is called to digest thrice a day much more than is needed for a while it does it work, but soon begins to flag; that moment its work is imperfectly done, the material which it supplies, out of which the blood is to be made, is imperfect, and hence imperfect blood is an inevitable result. This blood nourishes the brain, out of it the brain is repaired, out of it the brain 5 3-tf grows, out of it the brain is made, and as inevitably must become imperfect, or as we say, "diseased," by which we mean that it is unnatural in size, in condition, in function; either larger or smaller in General Commission Merchants, Honolulu, Oahu, S. L. 105-tf bulk or weight than it ought to be, or of constituents not common to it in a healthful state. The brain itself, the organ of thought, being diseased, the re- Comsuits of its operations, that is the thoughts and the actions of the man must be diseased. Hence we said in a previous number that a dyspeptic man was fit Wholesale Dealer in Wines and Spirits, Ale and Porter, ner to do nothing right, or more correctly speaking, a dyspeptic is unfit for any thing, for any public sta-tion, whether the pulpit, press or bench. Doctors hav'nt time to become dyspeptic, or they hav'nt any thing to get dyspeptic on; besides, they have too much sense to precipitate themselves into a dis ease which makes such fools of men. There is a delirium tremens of over eating as well as of over drinking. A penalty is attached to gormandizing alike to that of drunkenness, although public opinion fondles the glutton and throws around him mild charity's most capacious mantle. But nature, the impartial judge, inflicts on both a like penalty. The terrible feature in delirium tremens is a horror of imaginary foes, of serpents, dogs and devils pursuing with relentless fury, or torturing with remorseless hate. Not much different is it with an over eater-a dyspeptic. Imaginary terrors seize hold of them, fearful, horrible thoughts invade them. A gentleman suffering from aggravated dyspepsia said to us, " Doctor, I would be ashamed to tell what thoughts I have sometimes. I am afraid of myself."

The day before his death, Mr. Miller said to his physician, " my brain is giving way. I have had a dreadful night of it. I cannot face another subh. I Importer and Dealer in HARDWARE, CUTLERY, MECHANICS' was impressed with the idea that my museum was attacked by robbers, and that I had got up, put on my clothes, and gone out with a loaded pistol to shoot them ; when I awoke in the morning I was Commission Merchants-Fire-Proof Buildings, Queen street trembling all over."

A kind of nightmare had for some nights rendered p most miserable. A sense of vague and intense horror, with a conviction of being abroad in the night win i and dragged through places as if by some invisible power ! " Last night I felt as if I had been ridden by a witch for fifty miles, and rose far more weary in mind and body than when I lay
